SUNNYVALE AIR BASE SITE RECOMMENDED BY THE NAVAL COMMITTEE

THE HOUSE of Representatives' Naval Committee last Thursday recommended that the Sunnyvale site be selected for the navy's $5,000,000 air base for lighter-than-air ships.

Mrs. Laura Wipple, of Niles, and O. N. Hirsch, of Irvington, are the two persons responsible for starting the agitation in favor of this site. Mrs. Whiple first interested Mr. Hirsch, who then enlisted the aid of A. B. Curtner, of San Jose. With his help the San Jose Chamber of Commerce was informed of the plans and hopes of these three. The fight for the site was at that point only begun and has since been waged by chambers of commerce, individuals, naval officials, and politicians generally.

Opponents have urged the merits of the Camp Kearny site, and the recent report of Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, to the naval committee was instrumental in influencing the decision. Admiral Pratt recently flew over both sites in a survey of them preparatory to making up his report.

There is still work to be done before the site becomes a reality because the committee's recommendation has yet to be passed on by both houses of Congress. Local boosters of the site are working harder than ever now and hoping for a favorable decision in the near future.

In addition to her daughter, the dead woman is survived by two sons, August and Michael De Mattie, of San Jose; and two grandchildren, Agnes and Robert Trinchero, of Los Gatos.

It will be remembered that L. J. Trinchero, who ran a grocery in Niles for fifteen years, left here six months ago; and with his family moved to Los Gatos where he is now living.

AMERICAN GRILL NEARLY COMPLETE; WILL OPEN SOON

Andy Paziotis and Gus Makris are Partners In New Concern

Andy Paziotis, as manager, and Gus Makris, as chef, are the proprietors of the American Grill, Niles, which is nearly completed on Main street. Located in the new Odd Fellows' building, the restaurant will be open by Christmas, the proprietors hope.

Modern appointments and sanitary equipment bid fair to make it the finest eating house in Niles. Food kept behind the counter, such as pies, cakes, and deserts of every discription, as well as fruits, melons, and other dainties will all be under glass, protected from flies and dust. Perishable foods will be kept in electrically refrigerated cupboards. The refrigeration plant will keep near freezing temperatures a large ice box in the kitchen, a chest behind the counter, and a window display case. Arrangements have also been made to have it cool the drinking water as it flows from the tap.

In the clean, airy kitchen is a gas range of the necessary size. Between the kitchen and the

"ONE MINUTE OF TWELVE" STAGED AT MASONIC HOME

Members of the Masonic Home, Decoto, enjoyed immensely the play, "One Minute of Twelve," last Friday night. The play was staged for their benefit in the auditorium at the Home by the Dramatic Section of the Country Club.

A rehearsal of the play in preparation for the performance was held at the Centerville home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dusterberry, December 8. The Dramatic Section was entertained at dinner there before the rehearsal.

The play is one which was presented before the public several weeks ago in the Legion Memorial Hall, Niles.

WELL-AIMED GOLF BALL SCORES BULL'S EYE

A WOMAN on the business end of a golf club caused a golf ball to strike Thomas Coyle, of San Francisco, brother of the manager of the Niles MacMarr store, in the shoulder Sunday.

Charles Coyle, of Niles, was playing golf with his brother and Dr. Frederick Nelson, of San Francisco. They had teed off and were strolling down the fairway to rejoin their balls. They were in no hurry because the green was occupied by the players ahead. But a woman behind them evidently was anxious to proceed with her game.

She made a typical womanly drive (according to Coyle) of approximately six and one-half inches. Addressing the ball with her brassie she swung mightly and lustily shouted "Fore!" But her breath was wasted; Thomas was hit.

The ball caused a black-and-blue spot.

ALAMEDA COUNTY TAXES INCREASE OVER LAST YEAR

Alameda county showed an increase of 8 cents in the tax rate applied to nonoperative property inside incorporated areas and an increase of 8 cents in the tax rate applied to property outside incorporated areas in the county for 1930-1931 as compared with the rates for 1929-1930, according to a study of county tax rates and assessed valuations for county purposes, made public by California Taxpayers' association, of Los Angeles. The rate for this year will be $1.79 inside and $2.19 outside. The assessed valuation to which the county tax rates are applied is $455,333,371. GRAND MASTER HUSHAW, OF FRESNO, TO OFFICIATE AT IMPRESSIVE DEDICATION

The opening of the new Niles Odd Fellows' Hall next Saturday evening will feature a public dedication to which are invited the residents of Niles and the surrounding communities. The building is a source of great pride and pleasure to the members who have worked hard to erect this temple of their order.

The dedication ceremonies will be in keeping with the high character of the work taught by Odd Fellowship, and being open to the public will give many who now know nothing of the works an insight into the high spiritual import of the order. Floyd E. Hushaw, Grand Master of the State, together with other Grand officers, will officiate at the dedicatory ceremonies. After the ceremonies a buffet lunch will be served and the hall will be open for inspection. Dancing will conclude the evening's entertainment.

Grand Master Hushaw will arrive from Fresno with his aids on an early afternoon train. A local committee consisting of Tony Mezza, Dr. R. H. Bennett, A. E. Metzker, H. L. Scott, Roy Rose, F. A. Ellis, and H. R. Hunt will meet his train and escort him to the hall for a rehearsal of

Prize for Good Housekeeping Is Awarded Niles

Niles office employees of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company prove to be "good housekeepers."

Following an inspection of the company's sixty-five offices the local office was awarded first prize as the best maintained agency office on the company's system.

Every year each of the company offices are inspected for "good housekeeping" by a local committee. This committee is followed by one from the general offices of the company, representing the publicity, auditing, sales departments, and the vice president in charge of public relations and sales. They select the three best offices among the division, district, and agency offices.

According to L. H. Newbert, division manager, the committee reports the local office almost 100 per cent.

FORMER REGISTER OWNER IS EDITOR OUT IN NEBRASKA

Clarke L. Wilson, former owner of the Register, is now editor of the Wakefield (Nebraska) republican.

A copy of the paper was received in the Register's mail this last week. It is an interesting, "newsy" sheet and reflects the work Mr. Wilson is undoubtedly putting in on it. The Republican circulates in the heart of Nebraska's best agricultural district—Dixon, Wayne, and Thurston counties.

Niles Man Back From Two Weeks' Vacation

T. L. Bettencourt returned to Niles Friday night after spending a two weeks' vacation with his brother, Larry Bettencourt, in Memphis, Tennessee.

Larry is a former football star of Saint Mary's college and is now coaching in a catholic school in Memphis. He also plays professional football on the Memphis team.

The Niles man reports attending one football game in which his brother played. It was a battle between Memphis and the Chicago Cardinals.

MANY PLEDGE BY MONTH TO HELP WELFARE BOARD

Single Donations Also Help Support Poor Children

The work of the Welfare Board of South Alameda County is comparatively new in this section. The board was organized to provide for the needy who are to be seen on every hand. One branch of the work, which cannot fail to be of interest to everybody, and which many of the ladies of the township are working for, is the children's work.

The county pays twenty dollars per month per child for every one brought to the attention and taken under the care of the board. Such children are placed in private homes where they will receive loving care, shelter, and good food.

It has been found that the county's allotment is not sufficient. It requires from one and one-half to three and one-half dol-

EDITORIAL COMMENT

By NORMAN H. PARKS, Publisher Register

ANOTHER LAND MARK PASSES

The writer's enthusiasm this morning is a thing to marvel at. It is infectious. He is all buoyed up—

The bandstand, for years an eye sore on Main street, Niles, has effaced itself from the landscape!

For two years this paper has been endeavoring to get the Chamber of Commerce or some responsible civic body to either remove the dilapidated structure that at one time in the distant past served as a municipal stand for its weekly concerts, or have the thing painted. At last something has been done.

Good Citizen Jones, we believe, got action from the Niles Chamber of Commerce a few weeks ago, and Monday, Hansen Lumber Company had a crew of men haul the junk away.

Lots of things are happening in Niles recently. Some may be only little things, but they are all moving to a better looking town. Municipal pride, long dormant, is bestiring itself. Where apathy but yesterday stalked the dusty and ill-kept streets of this town, today activity and civic pride is everywhere noticeable.

** * **

The Register has always expressed confidence in the future of Niles. Others have shrugged their shoulders when this paper has envisioned an important city here, saying that it could not be done. But it is being done, because it is inevitable. Location, transportation facilities, climate, and now the proper civic spirit, are all amalgamating their forces for a bigger and busier Niles.

DOER OF BIG THINGS

The Township Register salutes three Washington township people who measure big in the public eye today—Mrs James R. Whipple, Niles; O. N. Hirsch, Irvington, and O. B. Courtner, Warm Springs.

These three people, almost single handed, have won the fight for Sunnyvale, and brought the air naval base to this locality. For almost two years these three people with vision beyond the humdrum of every-day life, conceived the idea of having the United States government establish one of the Western air units in the bay region, and picked Sunnyvale as an ideal site. Many discouragements met their plan—indifference on the part of those most intimately benefitted by the project—hostility from other sections that also sought this coveted prize. In face of opposition that would have crushed less determined souls they fought on, and now they receive the acclaim of a grateful and admiring public, who, around this bay region, arise as one to show their appreciation.

J. R. Davison Talks On Chamber of Commerce Work

Members of the Chamber of Commerce were unusually pleased with the savory meal prepared by the Parent-Teachers Association Tuesday noon in the grammar school. J. R. Davison, of Hayward, was the guest speaker and brought an interesting message on chamber of commerce work. Davison took the place of Judge Jacob Harder who could not be present because of pressing and unexpected business engagements.

Before any business was taken up Judge Silva led the members in a rising vote of thanks to the ladies. Judge Allen Norris, of Centerville, Judge A. J. Silva, of Niles, Constable Tom Silva, of Centerville, and Frank Dusterberry, of Centerville, all expressed their appreciation at being present.

After the reading of the minutes by J. E. Townsend, secretary, a report on the Boy Scout drive showed that the Niles quota is practically complete. In every instance donators gave as much or more than they did last year.

The speaker, Mr. Davison, was then introduced and he expressed Judge Harder's regret at not being present. He brought greetings from the Hayward chamber and introduced his talk with the the evening's program. After the rehearsal the visiting officers will be entertained at a dinner in the Florence Restaurant.

The public dedication ceremonies will begin at eight-thirty. Following the impressive ritualistic work informal remarks will be made by members and officers of the local order.

The dance, which winds up the evening, is to be an old time dance. Music will be furnished by a haywire orchestra composed of Fred Mitte, violin, Walter Walker, banjo and jew's harp, C. E. Davis, fiddle, and William Paul, piano. W. L. Gardner will call the dances.

Refreshments will consist of coffee and sandwiches to be served from the kitchen of the building.

The building of soft brick is a pleasing addition to the center of the business section of the city and its architectural lines are beautiful, with stores on the lower floor and the second story used solely for lodge purposes. A spacious lodge room together with banquet room, commodious locker space and beautiful rest rooms make of the hall a much needed addition to the housing facilities for the many fraternal orders using the building in addition to the Odd Fellows and their sister branch, the Rebekas.

WEDGEWOOD LIONS WIN FIRST GAME TWELVE TO SEVEN

Two Team Members Lent to Opponents Score For Them

The Wedgewood Lions won from an Irvington eleven by a score of twelve to seven Sunday afternoon. The game was played on the Washington Union high school field in Centerville.

Irvington's seven points were largely due to the playing of two members of the Wedgewood squad who were lent to the Irvington team. Irvington was short two players and Coach Frank Jones sent Clarence Soito and Teddy Logan to fill in the vacancies. Soito made a touchdown and a pass to Logan gave Irvington the point after goal.

Wedgewood's second string played the entire first half, without scoring. In the second half the first team took the field and by the end of the game Captain Eldred Laudenslager had crossed the goal twice. Both tries for point failed.

Jess W. Regli, of Centerville, who was to have refereed the game was called away suddenly, and his place was taken by Mervin Meto, of Oakland.

The lineups of the Wedgewood teams follow:

First String

Tony and Al Ornelas, ends; Louie DeValle and Frank Salles, tackles; Subino Ramos and Anthony Rivers, guards; John Wilson, center; Eldred Laudenslager, quarterback; Hugh Steinhoff and Alfred Souza, halfbacks; Howard Laudenslager, fullback.

Second String

Funeral Services Are Conducted Wednesday In Presbyterian Church

Funeral services for Ferdinand M. Kruse were conducted last Wednesday afternoon at the Pleasanton Presbyterian church, with interment following at the Odd Fellows' Cemetery. Services at the church were in charge of Rev. Robert C. Cross, pastor, who paid a touching tribute to the memory of the man who had lived here so many years. R. O. Moyer sang "The End of a Perfect Day," and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere."

At the cemetery the ceremonies were conducted by Pleasanton lodge of Odd Fellows, of which Mr. Kruse had been a member for many years. He also was a member of the local Rebekahs.

DONS OF AMADOR DEFEAT HAYWARD BY 21 - 20 SCORE

First Basketball Game Results In Victory For Dons

Dons of Amador chalked up their first league victory of the basketball season last Friday evening when they downed the fast Hayward five by a score of 21 to 20 on the latter's court. In the second game of the evening the Amador "B" team trounced the Hayward "B's" by an 18 to 9 count.

It appeared throughout the game as if it was going to be just too bad for the Dons as the ball simply would not go through the hoops for them with the result that going into the final quarter the Dons were trailing under a 20 to 9 score. With a do or die spirit the Dons began staging a comeback with the result that they came within one point of tieing the score when time was called and only a few minutes left to play.

When the game was resumed the Dons sank a field goal putting them on top and then proceeded to freeze the ball for the remaining few seconds.

From all indications the game was won by the Dons when the Farmers became over confident and let down when they had marked up such a commanding lead. The victory was the first ever scored in basketball over the Hayward Farmers, and the lion's share of credit must be given to Coach George Patterson, of Amador Union High school, who has trained the boys to keep going until the final whistle no matter how badly they appear to be defeated.

William Bottini, captain, was the leading scorer, having 13 points to his credit. Bob Silva and Muggs George scored the other points, Bob getting 6 and Mugs two.

The "B" team, captained by Myron Azevedo, encountered hard going all the way, but having once obtained the lead was never headed. Charles Viada and Azevedo were the stars of the game.

The "C" team played Hayward on Wednesday and lost by a score of 11 to 5. Kenneth Harding is captain of the "C" squad.

Armstrong College "A" and "B" teams will be met in Berkeley this evening in a non-league contest. The Dons stand a fine chance of winning this encounter.

HIGH SCHOOL PLAY TO BE PRESENTED IN FEBRUARY, 1931

Rehearsals Now Under Way Directed by Miss Aubrey Nicely

"Adam and Eva," the student body play of the Washington Union high school will be given February 13, 131. Under the direction of Miss Aubrey Nicely the cast started practices last week.

Patty Duffy, a freshman from Niles, was given the leading part of Eva King. It is the first time a freshman has ever received a lead in a student body play. Evan Orelli, of Alvarado, plays opposite her as Adam Smith. Others in the cast follow:

Walter Beveridge, Decoto, as James King; Jewell Amaral, Centerville, as Corinthia; Paul Aust, Mission, as Clinton De Witt; Theo Elliot, Niles, as Julie De Witt; Mildred Durham, Centerville, as Aunt Abby; Gordon Pond, of Irvington, as Horace Pilgrims; Manuel Reina, of Alviso, as Lord Andrew; and John Munger, of Alvarado, as Dr. Nelamater.

The play takes up the story of a rich man and his extravagant family. He is called upon to support them all, even his in-laws. He decides to go away for a much-needed rest and leaves the family in the care of Adam Smith, his business manager, who thinks family life must be great.

Adam becomes disgusted with the extravagance of the family. Therefore, he manufactures a story of the father having failed in business. The fun begins when the members of the family try to support themselves.

FIREMEN-ATHLETIC BARBECUE, MONDAY, DRAWS BIG CROWD

Married Men Beat Bachelors at Volleyball; Score Sixteen-Fourteen

A joint barbecue for members of the Centerville Athletic Club and the Fire Department was held in the town hall Monday night. Fire chiefs of all the surrounding towns were invited as was also Supervisor Ralph Richmond.

Possibly the evening's event which was of greatest interest was the volley ball game between the single men and the married men. The married men finished with the greater score although the single men claim a "moral victory." According to ardent champions of the single men their team, composed of three regulars and three "fill-ins" who had never played before, gave the married men's team composed entirely of veterans, the scare of their lives, so close was the score. But the married men won, sixteen to fourteen.

Among the visitors present were Roland Bendel, of Decoto; Jack Boyd, of Alvarado; Louis Ruschin, of Newark; R. Rathbun and Ralph Richmond, of Niles; and Frank Dusterberry, of Centerville. The visitors all gave a few remarks as did also Chief Fred Rogers, of Centerville.

Pleasanton Will Be Given Living Christmas Tree

American Legion Auxiliary Donates Tree To City Council

No more will the city be forced to depend upon a donated Christmas tree, which many times in the past has been a scrawny specimen, as it will have a tree, the gift of the American Legion Auxiliary.

The offer to present Pleasanton with a living Christmas tree was made to council Monday night by Councilman R. W. Apperson on behalf of the Auxiliary. Council accepted the offer with thanks and ordered the city clerk to address a letter to the members of the Auxiliary expressing the board's appreciation of the gift.

While it was not definitely decided at the session this week, it is contemplated that the tree will be placed in the center of the city hall lawn where it will be visible at all times from considerable distance both ways along Main St.

The tree will be in readiness within a short time, it was said, and will be planted and lighted for this Christmas. It is planned by the Auxiliary to have a short ceremony when the evergreen is planted.

Coroner's Jury Holds Railroad System Is Poor

Four Men Lose Lives In Crash At Sunol Last Week

DEATHS ACCIDENTAL

Train Crews Are Exonerated in Findings of Inquest

Exoneration of the Western Pacific train crew which figured in the crash which cost four men their lives at Sunol last week, and the blame placed upon the Western Pacific Railroad Company for its laxity in the system of operating its freight trains was the findings of a corner's jury in session in Pleasanton last Tuesday morning.

The crash occurred when Extra No. 37 crashed into the rear of the regular Stockton to Oakand freight which was pulling into the siding at Sunol to permit an eastbound passenger train to pass. The four men killed were R. M. Middleton, engineer, of Oakland; W. W. Reichenback, fireman, of Oakland; Lloyd Gostlin, brakeman, of Oakland; and R. C. Jones, brakeman, of Stockton.

The engine of the extra freight ploughed through the caboose of the other train. The engineer and fireman and the brakeman Gostlin, were riding in the locomotive of the extra freight. Brakeman Jones was in the caboose of the first freight and jumped, but in leaping he landed in the path of the rearing locomotive. All four of the men met death by suffocation from the scalding steam and from shock, according to Dr. M. E. Eastman. who was called to view the bodies by Deputy Coroner Chas. Graham.

Among those called as witnesses at the inquest were Curtis Risk and Walter McCollough, conductors of the regular and extra freights, respectively.

It was brought out by Conductor Risk that he did not know of the extra freight following his train, and that he had not received any orders after his train had left Stockton on the run to Oakland. He also stated that the trains between Stockton and Oakland run by time tables, and that they take siding to allow faster trains to pass by the time table. He stated that there was no block system between those two points and only one all night telegraph station.

All of this testimony was corroborated by Conductor McCullough. He added that he was informed at Stockton that the regular freight was ahead of him, but had left some two hours earlier, figured to overtake it near Pleasanton or Sunol as they were running on nearly passenger time, being a light merchandise freight of only ten cars.

At the telegraph point, Carbone, they were given the board, meaning that there were no orders for them at that point. At Livermore the extra was forced to stop on account of a hot box, and because of that delay the crew of the extra did not figure to overtake the train ahead.

In the matter of sending back a flagman when stopping. Conductor Risk declaring that they did not do so when making only momentary halt, such as was the case at Sunol.

The rear of the regular freight was just around a turn, about fifteen car lengths, according to the conductors, and it was impossible for Engineer Middleton to see the standing train until after rounding the curve. That he did see it and attempt to stop was the testimony of Conductor McCollough, who stated that he was riding in caboose at the time and that the air brakes were applied a few moments before the crash.

McCollough estimated that his train was making about twenty-five miles an hour when it rounded the turn, as they were slowing down to take siding at Sunol.

Pins Are Presented To 100 Girls In Recognition of Work During Year

W. Briggs presented 100 of the girls who have completed the required work, with pins. Thirteen of the pins were given to Pleasanton 4-H club girls.

Each 4-H club put on a short stunt which was followed by a program arranged by the members of the local clubs. After the entertainment the girls were served with punch and cookies.

NEW MOTER PUMP IS PURCHASED BY CITY OF PLEASANTON

Centrifugal Type Machine Will Increase Its Effectiveness

Purchase of a centrifugal pump for the township patrol of the Pleasanton Volunteer Fire Department was ordered at the last meeting of the organization, according to an announcement made by Fire Chief Will Graham, of Pleasanton, this week.

The new pump will replace the small rotary pump now being used which was badly damaged following its use some time ago to pump water from a ditch. The centrifugal pump will be fitted to the front of the truck and will be driven by the regular motor of the vehicle, instead of by an auxiliary engine as is now the case.

It is said that the new pump will enable the fire department to have use of a much stronger stream of water and that it will furnish a steady pressure.

SERVICE UNITS TAKE OVER NEW MEETING ROOMS

Pleasanton Legion and Auxiliary Now In Arendt Building

Confident of having their own memorial building within the near future, members of Pleasanton Post, No. 237, American Legion and its Auxiliary, have moved into new club rooms in the Arendt building, Pleasanton, the first meeting in the quarters having been held Wednesday.

The service groups have been using various quarters since they sold their own building some time ago. They have been disappointed several times in the matter of having a memorial hall erected here, but have been given to understand now that it will be within the next year.

The Legion and Auxiliary wish to thank the Pleasanton city council and the Women's Improvement club for the use of their rooms in the city hall during the past few months.

The Auxiliary had as its guest at this week's meeting, Mrs. Lillie Moore, of Albany, who is Hospitalization chairman for districts nine and ten.

PLEASANTON BUYS ADDING MACHINE OF LATEST TYPE

League Games Started Friday On Hayward Basketball Court

Keeping in step with its modern housing, city council Monday evening ordered the purchase of the latest type of electric adding machine for the use of the office force.

The machine is one of the smallest electrics ever made. It subtracts ond multiplies as well as adds, and after a thorough demonstration to council its purchase was authorized.

The price quoted the city was $180 less a two percent discount. An allowance also was made on the old machine which the city has been using for fifteen years, and which quit cold on City Clerk Crawford Letham this week.

Council was faced with a bill for repairs on its old machine, which has more than outlived its usefulness, and decided upon the new model.

The new machine with its subtracting action will be a boon to the city water deparment in making out the monthly water bills, making it possible to tabulate the meter reading on all bills on which there is an over charge.

It also will be a boon to the city clerk in preparing his assessment roll which runs into thousands of dollars, and in which there is much multiplying. This work has had to be tabulated by hand in the past.

Okra Emigrates

FORMERLY people who lived in the North could get okra only in its dried form. Now the canning of okra, whole or sliced, has virtually supplanted the older form, and the Northerner as well as the Southerner can get this distinctive vegetable in cans.

How to Cook Okra

The small pod of the okra is the part that is eaten, and its mild flavor is much liked by its devotees. Creole cooks whose flair for good cooking is too well known to need proclaiming are famous for their gumbo (or okra) soups. Okra is especially good in combinations with tomatoes. Or, for a more substantial dish, okra can be combined with cheese to make:

Okra au Gratin: Cut the okra from a No. 2 can in thin slices. Make a cheese sauce by melting three tablespoons butter, stirring in three tablespoons flour, one-half teaspoon salt and one-eighth teaspoon pepper, and adding one and one-half cups milk gradually, stirring constantly. Cook until smooth and thick, still stirring contantly. Then add three-fourths cup grated cheese and stir until melted. Combine with the okra, and pour into individual buttered ramekins or custard cups. Cover with crumbs and brown in a hot oven. This recipe will serve six people.

Canned okra may be well seasoned with salt and pepper and served by itself as a dinner vegetable. Sometime when you are feeling tired of all the ordinary vegetables, why not try this unusual vegetable? It will undoubtedly be a welcome addition to your food repertoire.*

Something for the car will be a constant reminder of the donor's thoughtfulness in selecting an item that all can enjoy.

THE DOUBLE CROSS

by

A. E. THOMAS

W.N.U. SERVICE

Copyright. By Dodd, Mead and Company, Inc.

Two persons enter into a conspiracy against a third one. One of the conspirators is not true to the compact. Secretly he informs the third party or takes other action that defeats the conspiracy and throws the burden on his trusting partner Such is the origin of the term, double cross. It has had various modifications and applications until it has come to mean almost any underhanded gaining of confidence and subsequent betrayal. Beginning as a slang term, it was too expressive to remain so, and is now a recognized figure of speech. A singularly wicked form of the double cross is the basis for this story. A man proves recreant to the most sincere form of friendship, recreant to the partner who held him in the closest regard, aided him over rough places, paid his debts and persistently excused or overlooked his faults. The most dastardly action was when the false friend came between the true one and the woman he loved

Written by a successful playwright, the story is essentially dramatic, crisp in dialogue and realistic in action. The metropolitan setting is used with fine effect to produce atmosphere and characterization. The absorbing elements of the plot are rendered more fascinating by a vein of subtlety and mystery leading to an unexpected climax near the end. The story might appropriately be termed the triple cross, for the double crosser himself becomes the victim of one whom he trustingly took into his enterprise.

CHAPTER I.—Jim Stanley, wealthy young New York business man, unable to concentrate in his dictation to his desk audiphone, has the machine taken to his home, intending to finish his work there. Rollin Waterman, his business partner and closest friend, comes in. Both men are avowedly in love with Doris Colby Stanley proposes they toss a coin to determine which of them shall, that evening, first ask her to marry him Waterman wins.

CHAPTER II.—Nina Morgan, Waterman's secretary, also his mistress, has overheard his conversation with Stanley and resents Waterman's plans to desert her. Waterman tells her he is practically penniless and must make a rich marriage. He urges Nina to go to Doris and tell her she (Nina) has been wronged—but by Stanley. The girl consents, on Waterman's promise to take care of her.

CHAPTER III.—Doris admits to her father her interest in both Stanley and Waterman, and is sure they are both in love with her, but she is unable to make up her mind which to marry

CHAPTER IV.—Nina goes to Doris with her story, securing a promise that Doris will not reveal the source of her information. She convinces Doris of Stanley's duplicity, and leaves her broken hearted, and realizing that it is Stanley she really has loved

CHAPTER V.—Waterman that evening asks Doris to marry him, and she, believing Stanley unworthy, accepts him. According to the arrangement, Stanley appears, to learn his rival has won. He accepts the situation, and as a wedding present gives his share of the business to Waterman. Next day he arranges with his secretary, Frank Wilson, to take charge of his other business interests. He is going to India.

CHAPTER VI.—Doris, unable to put Stanley completely out of her mind, tells Waterman part of Nina's story. He promises to "try" to find the girl, so that full corroboration can be made. Waterman is deeply in debt to a gambler, Bromfield, and the latter presses for payment. Waterman quiets him by the news of his engagement to the wealthy Doris Colby.

CHAPTER VII.—Waterman makes a financial arrangement with Nina which will insure her silence.

CHAPTER VIII.—Frank Wilson, who has long been aware of Waterman's crooked business methods and his debts, sees Nina at the wedding, and vague suspicions are aroused in him. He leaves Waterman's employ. The latter begins to importune Doris for money, ostensibly for the "business" but actually for gambling purposes.

CHAPTER IX.—At Waterman's urging Doris wears her magnificent diamond necklace, which had been her dead mother's, to the opera. That night it disappears. Doris' father enlists Bromfield's aid in tracing the stones (the gambler's wide underworld acquaintance making him a likely party to get information about the gems), and is apparently satisfied with the results of Bromfield's efforts.

CHAPTER X.—Stanley returns to New York with an East Indian friend, Swami Ramanara. Doris realizes now that she loves him, and always has. Made desperate by Waterman's conduct she suggests separation or divorce. Waterman refuses to consider either. Stanley calling on Doris, feels all his old love for the girl awakened. He invites her and Waterman to his country home the following Saturday. Toying with the audiphone which had been in use in Stanley's old office, the machine reproduces the conversation Waterman had with Nina Morgan when the conspiracy was arranged, and Stanley's eyes are opened.

CHAPTER XI.—Doris' father gives Stanley details of Waterman's misconduct, including the theft of Doris' diamonds, which Bromfield had recovered. Waterman had used them to pay gambling debts. Mr. Colby entrusts the gems to Stanley. Doris tells Jim of Nina's charge against him and he easily convinces her of its falsity. Feeling that both of their lives have been spoiled, Stanley determines on exposing Waterman's treachery.

"What is it, O'Hara?"

"Did you want me, Mr. Stanley?"

"Oh, yes, O'Hara, please don't turn in just yet. I shall have some letters for you to take to the village. I want them to catch the early morning post."

"All right, sir," said the chauffeur, and departed.

Now although Waterman had for a time recovered his assurance, Doris had by no means recovered hers. In point of fact, she was conscious that before long her nerves might play her false. Not in all her life had she felt so completely on edge as at the present moment. It was not only that she was miserably unhappy. She was in a state of intolerable apprehension. Something was going to happen. She had no idea what it was—she didn't want to know. She had a ridiculous idea that at any moment she might leap to her feet and scream. Suddenly she felt that she must get away. It was an impulse she could not control, so as the chauffeur disappeared she rose abruptly and said:

"And speaking of turning in, I think I shall do just that."

"Oh, not yet, surely?" objected Stanley, politely.

"I think so. My head is splitting and I sleep badly of late—hardly at all after five o'clock. So I must get started early, or I get no rest."

Stanley offered no further objection. "Well, of course, in that case," he said solicitously.

"Good-night, my dear Doris, and I hope your dreams may be agreeable. I shall see you in the morning?"

"Of course."

Waterman looked sharply at his friend, as he stood there holding his wife's hand in his own. A slight suspicion crossed his mind that there might be a double meaning in his speech, but if so he could not fathom it. Instead, he filled his glass again.

Doris, on her part, was in no wise reassured by Stanley's gayety. She felt that it was spurious, assumed for a definite purpose, but what that purpose was she could not tell. Again the impulse for flight overwhelmed her.

"Well," she said, forcing a smile, "there's only one Jim. All the same I—"

"Yes," smiled Stanley.

She sighed gently. "Nothing," she said, and went out.

Stanley turned briskly to Waterman.

"Well, Rollin, this is charming, charming! Next to being happy one's self, the best thing is to see one's friends happy. I'm delighted that your marriage has turned out so awfully well."

Waterman's spirits rose. Doris had not given him away, he thought. Too proud—that was it. However, he had a purpose of his own in view. He needed help. He had always relied upon Stanley for that. He could rely upon him now. So he said:

"Yes—not bad, on the whole. But of course no marriage is absolutely idyllic. But take it by and large, it hasn't turned out badly."

"Not idyllic!" cried Stanley. "Why, what's wrong?"

"Oh, nothing serious, but—oh, well, when the wife has most of the money—"

"Ah," cried Stanley, as if his point of view had suddenly broadened.

"Yes—devilish awkward at times!"

"Well, well," continued Stanley genially, "we must find a way to set you on your feet again. By the way, what became of all the old office staff? I didn't recognize a single face the other day. What happened to Higgins?"

"Oh, he landed on his feet. He's with Lane and Adams."

"Good—fine chap, Higgins. And that—what's her name? Oh, yes, that Morgan girl?"

That was the last name that Waterman had wished to hear. He was a trifle startled, but he did his best to conceal it.

"Why, what about her?" he asked, shifting uneasily in his chair.

"Oh, nothing—she just flashed into my mind. Rather a vivid personality, don't you think?"

"Yes—yes—"

"I saw her the other day."

"Where? How?" He could not exclude an accent of alarm, but Stanley ignored it.

"Oh, on the Avenue."

"Did you speak to her?"

"No—why?"

"Oh, I just wondered."

"Driving uptown—just caught a flash of her face in the crowd," Stanley continued. "And by the way—do you remember our last afternoon in the office together? I mean that fateful afternoon when we tossed a coin to see who should first propose to Doris."

"Oh, yes, yes," said Waterman. He raised his arms to his head, stifled a yawn, and said, "By gad, I'm getting sleepy, sitting here in front of that fire. I think I'll turn in."

"Oh, my dear chap," cried Stanley, "no, not yet! I have something most interesting to show you—something extraordinary.

"Well—" said Waterman feebly.

"Yes, it's a thing that wouldn't happen once in a thousand times, and—oh, that makes me think. I had a little talk with Doris before you came downstairs just before dinner. She told me something that explained many things."

His voice was still kindly, still genial, yet Waterman's apprehension increased.

"What did she tell you?" he asked.

"Why—er—" Stanley went on, feeling the other's gaze as he spoke, "she said that on that very night I've just been speaking of—you know, the night you won her and I lost her—some woman came to her and told a scandalous story about me."

Waterman thought it necessary to affect amazement. "Really?" he said.

But Stanley gave him a slightly mocking smile. "Oh, come now, my dear chap—no use pretending you don't know it, because she told me that you do."

Waterman fidgeted. "Well, of course," he said, with outspread hands.

"Oh, I know you promised her you wouldn't tell, and—you were always the soul of honor. However, as she has told, you needn't pretend any longer."

Waterman could not suppress a wave of discomfort. "Well," he said finally, "it's her business."

"Yes," agreed Stanley, "and mine—just a little. I suppose you don't happen to know the exact details of this woman's story?"

This put Waterman in a hole. Being in complete ignorance of what Doris had told Stanley, he hadn't the faintest idea how to answer. But after a moment's hesitation he decided it was safer to deny knowledge of the matter.

"Why no—no," he said.

"Nor who this woman was?"

"No—no—certainly not."

Stanley smiled again, still amiably. "Naturally," he remarked. "I'm a bit curious to know what villainy I'm accused of."

"She—er—she didn't tell me," stammered the other. "Said she'd promised."

"Yes—well, I'm glad to see that Doris has finally come around to your opinion, Rolly."

Waterman's shoulder. "Well now—help yourself to the port—to get back to that afternoon in the office—oh, just a moment—"

He rose, walked to the desk and pressed a button. After a moment the little door behind the desk swung open and Wilson appeared. "Frank," said Stanley, "I want you to fetch that machine here, if you please—you know the one I mean."

Wilson looked at him an instant and swallowed hard before he said, "Very well, sir," and went out.

Waterman made a heroic effort to shake off his growing uneasiness. "What is it, a radio?" he said.

"No," smiled Stanley, "it's not a radio. It's—well, I suppose we might call it a sort of accounting machine. It was once used in our old office."

Accounting machine — accounting—Waterman somehow disliked that word. "Didn't know we had any accounting machines," he observed.

"Well," returned the other, "we had this one, and I rather think you'll recognize it."

At that moment Wilson reappeared. In his hands he carried the audiphone.

"Set it here, Frank," commanded Stanley, indicating the desk, "and you needn't sit up any longer. I sha'n't need you again tonight."

Wilson fixed his eyes upon him—"Are you sure, sir?"

"Oh, quite sure," said Stanley, easily.

Wilson had another brief struggle with himself. He opened his mouth to speak again, then shut it with a snap and slowly went out, closing the door behind him.

"What the devil's the matter with the fellow?" demanded Waterman. "Looks as if he'd seen a ghost!"

"Perhaps he has—I told you the house is full of them."

Waterman shook his head slightly, as if to get rid of an uncomfortable garment. He rose and walked to the desk. "Accounting machine? Why, it's nothing but an audiphone."

"It looks like one," agreed Stanley, "but before we're through with it I think you'll admit that—it has something to do with accounting. "You see," he went on, easily, this thing stood on my desk in the office the last day I was there and I had it sent down here that night. I had been dictating and—er—by the way, you never used one, did you, Rolly?"

"No."

"No, you prefer—stenographers. Well, I'd been dictating, as I say, and I thought I'd clear up a lot of work over Sunday. So I sent this thing down to the house. But I never came here again for over a year, for reasons that you know very well. The day I entered this room for the first time, here stood that machine. Out of idle curiosity I started the thing, and—and—well—you shall hear what I heard. It's extraordinary—an audible recreation of the past, after a year. Remarkable!"

He sat down, lighted a fresh cigar meditatively, and appeared to fall into a muse. After a time, unable longer to endure the silence, Waterman said sharply:

"Well, well—go on, go on."

"Aren't you a little impatient tonight?" asked the other.

"Sorry."

"I wouldn't be in any hurry, if I were you."

"What the h—l do you mean by that?" cried Waterman, with the abrupt violence of a crash.

"Why, Rollin!" Stanley reproached him gently.

The other controlled himself with dining room is a serving table of the latest design. It is, of course, equipped to keep foods hot.

Along one side of the dining room is the lunch counter. In the center are the open tables and oposite the counter are the booths, with cozy and convenient appointments. In each booth is a mirror. A push button calls immediate service from the waiter. A shaded lamp and a phonograph control complete the equipment.

The phonograph, itself, is hidden from view. Two mellow speakers built into the wall furnish music for the diners.

observations that the city with a chamber of commerce is a better place to live than one without and that any chamber of commerce can only succeed in the same proportion as it serves its community.

Chamber of commerce work, he said, may be divided into three classes, economic, social, and mental. Under the first classification come numerous items. A live chamber holds for the city the business that is properly due it; it teaches improved merchandising methods; it improves the working condition of business men; it deals with the question of good roads; it makes a study of markets for the community's products; it organizes the community thought into a unit and provides a means of making the community's needs and advantages known to the world; and it makes a study of new businesses that may be started in the community.

Under the social side of the work a chamber may well keep in touch with the educational matters of the district and back up the parent-teachers associations and others concerned in education. health problems, drainage, and city beautifying fall naturally into its scope of activities. A chamber of commerce organizes its city's recreation, busying itself in working for parks, swimming pools, and festivals.

Under the third group of a chamber's duties comes the problem of making the city a place people want to live in. This problem involves the same kind of work as is necessary in turning a "house" into a home." And lastly a chamber of commerce is organized to help its community to progress under the principle that "God helps those who help themselves."
